Newsletter

A very nice day to you all!

I hope this first edition of my newsletter finds you well. I must admit that I am a little nervous: I was planning to announce the start of a new series of journals here and now - with leather covers with old maps and illustrations printed on them. But unfortunately there is some more research required before I can really launch this. But there are also good news:

My mini poetry book "du bist min, ich bin din" is still on display at the Scottish Poetry Library in Edinburgh, and will be until November 27th. If you can make it, please tell me how the show was, and what books you saw there beside mine!

I will discontinue my series of "Write it up!"-journals, and so, to clear out my stashes, they are available at a discount now.

In their place I am now offering fully recycled jeans books: The covers are made of recycled jeans with the backpocket on the front cover to hold some small items, like a pen and an eraser. The pages are made of a paper that invites rough sketches in coal or graphite.

At the moment I dedicate a big chunk of my time to writing about making books, rather than making them: I have had frequent requests for Coptic binding instructions since I wrote my book about Coptic headbands, and I finally started to work on this project. However, since there seem to be no instructions or tutorials in German language on that topic available at all, I am writing in German this time. I might translate it to English some time, but until this happens, a couple of newsletters will get written.

I generally love doing custom orders, so let me know if there is something I can do for you. If you want to order a customized journal for the holidays, I would be very pleased! Just let me know before November 21st, so that I can finish it, and get it into the mail in time.

And with this, I wish you wonderfully golden autumn days and quiet evenings with a mug of chocolate or tea in the one hand, a pen in the other, and a beautiful journal on the lap.

Hilke Kurzke

P.S.: At least that is my wish to you if you are living on the Northern Hemisphere. A very beautiful and cheerful spring to everyone from down under!
